RESOLUTION TITLE (limited to 5 words): Environmental justice

BE IT RESOLVED THAT:

Support protections and provide funding for environmental justice communities statewide from pollution, extreme heat, and other environmental harms, and ensure that these communities' voices are fully included in permitting decisions that impact them.

The International Energy Agency (IEA) recently published its flagship report titled "Net Zero by 2050", and the verdict is clear. No new fossil fuel expansion projects can be built in order to get to net zero emissions by 2050 and keep temperatures under 1.5 Degree C of warming.

- Minnesota's communities of color, low-income communities, and tribal nations have been disproportionately impacted by environmental health hazards due to being treated as "sacrifice zones" for polluting industries and infrastructure.
- Examples: the routing of I-94 in Saint Paul through the predominantly Black Rondo neighborhood, the state's most concentrated air pollution in the diverse East Phillips neighborhood in Minneapolis, or the destruction of wild rice and fish resources in Indigenous treaty lands.
- These communities have generally had little voice in the siting of these sources of pollution. State and local agencies have treated industries as their primary clients, rather than listening to the people who live there.
- Minnesota policy should seek to support and protect these vulnerable communities from existing environmental harms and center their voices on the front end of major permitting decisions, not as an afterthought.
